Quiz on PHP var_dump Function

1. What does the var_dump() function do in PHP?

A. Outputs variable information

B. Creates a variable

C. Deletes a variable

D. None of the above

2. Which of the following types can var_dump() display information about?

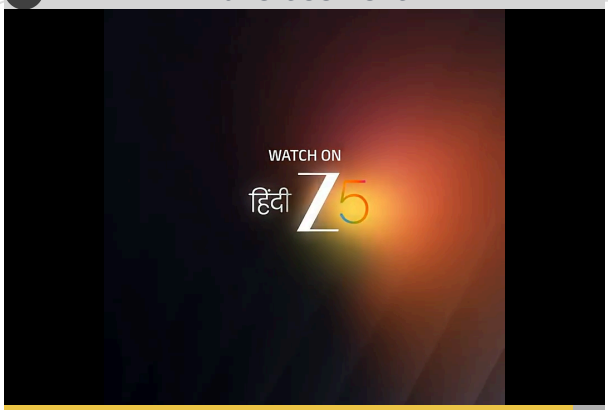
A. Strings

B. Arrays

C. Objects

D. All of the above

Advertisement



3. What will var_dump() output for an empty array?

A. NULL

B. 0

C. array(0)

D. array()

Answer (D): array()

For an empty array, var_dump() outputs 'array()'.

4. Is it possible to pass multiple variables to var_dump()?

A. Yes

B. No

C. Only if they are the same type

D. Only if they are arrays

Advertisement

[redacted]

es to var_dump() and it will output

5. What is the primary use case for using var_dump() in PHP?

A. Debugging

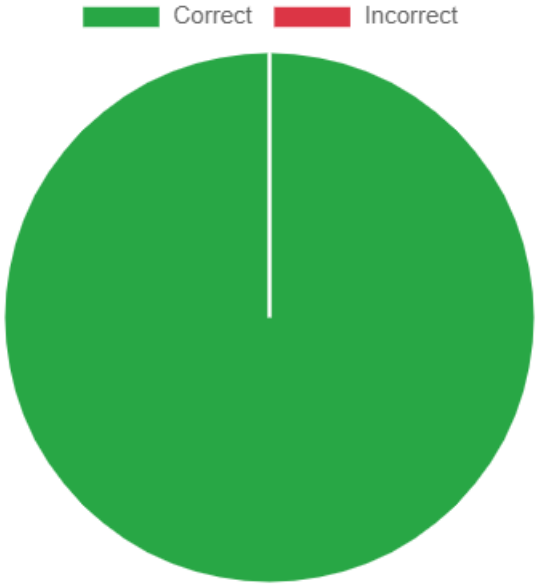
B. Displaying user data

C. Storing data

D. None of the above

Answer (A): Debugging
var_dump() is primarily used for debugging purposes to inspect variable contents.

You scored 5 out of 5!



Print Page

Submit Review

Advertisement